

CLI CHÉ 2018-04-17

HANS-JÜRGEN KRAHL (1943-1970)

DOCUMENTATION CLASS STRUGGLE, FRANKFURT SCHOOL, HANS JÜRGEN KRAHL, MAI 68, MARXISM, STUDENT REBELLION

“The anti-authoritarian revolt was precisely a process of Marxist training, in which we have gradually detached from bourgeois ideologies, in which we have revealed the purely ideological character of its promises of liberation, and definitively understood that the classic forms of liberalism and emancipation, which still drive the liberal capitalism of competition, have definitively passed away. We have understood that now, in the struggle against the state, against bourgeois justice, and against the organized power of capital, in a long and certainly difficult process, it is a matter of conquering conditions that allow us to enter into organized contact with the working class and to create the historical pressures necessary for the education of class consciousness. It was a long process of education which also had to impose itself within the SDS.” Krahl

read here several articles on Krahl in Viewpoint Magazine